“Bios, Books, and Brunch”: 2 Days of Writing and Conversation

Author Melissa Grunow talks about her book at the “Bios, Books, and Brunch” event held at Tamarack District Library

By Hope Nobel, TDL's Director

The library was abuzz this month with “Bios, Books, and Brunch”, a Friday to Saturday Author's Gala involving twenty-five authors from around the state. Published writers, avid readers, and writing hobbyists convened to exchange ideas. They shared stories over coffee and nibbled on scones while discussing editing tips. The mood was warm and convivial, and our library came alive. We're so grateful to everyone who participated!

Friday night's memoir workshop was well-attended with twenty-one participants, including writers from as far away as Bay City. Mardi Jo Link has impressive credentials and an interesting career both in journalism and in memoir writing. She brought out the skills of those at the workshop with great warmth, leading participants to share memories from many vivid points of view, both funny and poignant. Mardi Jo's favorite experience was sharing breakfast with some of our lady seniors – she had such fun with them, she barely had time to get ready and get to the library for Saturday's events! She told us, “I have thoroughly enjoyed my stay in Lakeview. Please invite me back.”

Saturday's festivities took over every nook and cranny of library space with author tables, conversation, and our own version of high tea. “I'm in heaven,” said one author, Randy Rassoul. Some of our patrons will remember her from last spring's “Downtown Abbey” tea party. Author of the traveling memoir and handbook “I Slept in a Pineapple”, Dr. Rassoul presented twelve tips on time management for those with busy lives and a dream for writing.
